

SOUTHERN MEDICAL UNIVERSITY SEEKS TOP-LEVEL TALENT

Southern Medical University (SMU), a national key university since 1979, started operating as the First Military Medical University in 1951. In 2004, it was taken over by the local government of Guangdong Province and was born as SMU. It comprises a main campus in Guangzhou and a campus in Shunde, and has 11 affiliated hospitals. SMU also houses one national key laboratory and a national clinical research centre.

The university covers seven areas: medicine, technology, engineering, literature, management, law and economics. Among its prime areas of study are clinical medicine, pharmacology and toxicology, biology and biochemistry, and neuroscience and behaviour. These have been ranked among the global top one percent according to the ESI.

SMU aims to develop a national leading medical university and improve human health through the integration of research, education, patient care, and community service. To achieve this goal, it has a strategy to strengthen its position with a deep pool of talented people. It now seeks outstanding personnel, and invites applications from high-level talents worldwide.
